The mission of Christ House is to provide comprehensive health care to sick, homeless men and women from the District of Columbia, and to assist them in addressing critical issues to help break the cycle of homelessness.

THE WINTER STORM'S AFTERMATH

Frostbite cases emerge weeks after a winter weather event

The negative effects of Washington, DC's latest winter storm will linger long after snowplows retreat from the streets. While the cold and snow are obvious threats to anyone without shelter, a severe winter weather event greatly increases the risk of frostbite.

Frostbite is an injury that occurs when the skin and underlying tissues freeze, and it is sometimes not identified until a few weeks after the damage is done.

The people most vulnerable to frostbite are those we serve at Christ House: the homeless. In addition to lacking protection from the cold, other factors that increase their risk include diabetes, heart disease, and hypertension—all conditions that affect the circulatory system and lessen sensation. Also, many living on the streets are elderly and have mobility problems, and suffer from mental illness and drug and alcohol addictions. This lessens their ability to leave a dangerous weather situation quickly.

Last year, we admitted a patient with severe frostbite injuries to both of his hands and hypothermia. He was found unresponsive on the street and taken to the ER, where he had to be resuscitated. When we received him at Christ House, he had undergone partial amputation of several fingers. Several others were still gangrenous and would need future amputation.

This man remained with us for six months. During his stay, he had twice daily dressing changes, received help with eating, basic hygiene needs, and dressing, and also underwent extensive physical therapy. He also suffered from schizophrenia, so nurses were sensitive to his mental state and how it affected his recovery.

Case management was essential in securing ongoing mental health treatment for this patient, and reuniting him with family members that he had been disconnected from.

The story of another patient illustrates that the treatment of frostbite depends on the timing and severity of the injury. Recently, a mental health outreach worker brought a man to us whose fingertips were black.

He is receiving his first frostbite treatment here, and it will be several weeks before we know the extent of the damage. He may require a surgical procedure for complete healing. We will continue to treat him with frequent dressing changes, arrange for any outside care that he needs, and provide the emotional support to cope with his injury.

When severe weather strikes, as it has this winter, a citywide response is necessary to protect vulnerable people on the streets. This includes the District government expanding shelter capacity, opening additional warming centers, outreach workers and police officers canvassing the city, and citizens calling the hypothermia hotline.

At Christ House, it is our privilege to be part of this effort to protect homeless individuals who are especially vulnerable during the harsh winter season.

A YEAR OF SERVICE & COMMUNITY

Applications are now open for the 2016-2017 Year-Long Volunteer Program! Each year, volunteers come to us from all over the country and always offer a fresh, energetic presence to our community. They serve 40 hours a week and provide presence, hard work, and determination in their roles. Year-long positions include: respite care assistants, nurse, activities coordinator, administration assistant, unit clerk, and case management assistant.

"Christ House is a place where I have come to care more deeply about each individual around me. I have become more passionate about ending stigmatization against and increasing education about poverty, health care, race, income inequality, mental health, and addiction. I knew that I cared about these issues before coming here, but it wasn't until I had worked in such proximity to these issues that everything really began to feel personal."

- Cristin, current year-long volunteer
